AIDAN DESIGN

Nadia N. Subaran, a talented and astute native Washingtonian, left D.C. to attend architecture school at The Cooper Union in New York City on a full scholarship. She returned seven years ago, unable to resist the pull of her roots to such a remarkable city. Together, she and her partner and husband, John A. Schmiedigen, created Aidan Design, a full-service design firm devoted to innovative concepts.

Beginning her design journey 12 years ago, Nadia's ever-increasing success with Aidan Design over the last five years is a testament to her exceptional taste and client rapport. Aidan Design is also home to architect Bertin Radifera, whose 20 years of design experience is a great asset to the firm. Collectively as Aidan Design, Nadia and Bertin work with a team of in-house project managers skilled in carpentry, developing projects that result in true customer satisfaction and reflect Aidan's signature styles.

With careful consideration for their clients' needs and desires, Nadia and Bertin work with each client from initial design concept to product selection and procurement, all the way through project completion. The innate ability of both Nadia and Bertin to create balance through simplicity and synergy of geometry, color, light and texture place them among the most sought after residential designers in their field. Aidan Design's work has been featured in Home and Design magazine, Washingtonian, Washington Spaces and Housetrends.

Working with clients one-on-one affords Nadia and Bertin the pleasure of undertaking projects with an array of diverse and engaging people and a freedom from convention that few enjoy so thoroughly and thoughtfully.
